2026 Program Funding Areas Guide

Program Area Fund 1: Arts & Justice Fund

General operating support | Grants: $10,000–$25,000 per year | Duration: 1, 2, or 3 years (renewable annually) |

The Arts & Justice Fund supports community-based arts and social justice advocacy through four distinct but interconnected funding streams.

The Arts

Justice

STREAM 1 | THE ARTS

Community Arts

Tuition-free, high-impact arts and music education delivered directly in neighborhoods and community settings.

Who Should Apply

- Community arts orgs providing tuition-free or subsidized arts/music education to youth ages 5–21 with little or no existing arts access
- Programs operating in community settings and neighborhoods
- Sequential programming where students learn in and through the arts, not just about them
- Programs that integrate social justice themes, culturally relevant and proximate historical narratives, and civic leadership development
- Organizations where participants, family, and community members help shape program design and organizational leadership by serving on boards or other community accountability structures.

What We Fund

- Sequential arts and music education programs in neighborhood and community settings
- Programs that explore social justice themes and social/culturally relevant historical reference points as core components of their program design
- Programming that develops students' creative voices as tools for civic engagement and advocacy
- Programs fostering social-emotional development, cultural awareness, and community understanding

Arts & Activism

Community organizing and social justice groups working at the intersection of arts and activism to advance civic change.

Who Should Apply

- Organizations explicitly combining arts and activism to advance civic engagement and community mobilization
- Groups using creative expression as a primary tool for public awareness and action-oriented change
- Organizations with authentic proximity to the issues and communities they address
- Groups working at the intersection of cultural production and social or political organizing
- Coalitions or collectives using performance, visual art, or media to drive community campaigns

What We Fund

- Arts-based civic engagement and community mobilization campaigns with arts playing an equally central role
- Creative projects that build public awareness and inspire community action on justice issues
- Organizing initiatives where arts and activism are intentionally and meaningfully integrated
- Public art, performance, and media projects strategically tied to justice campaigns with targeted outcomes
- Cultural organizing that bridges artistic practice and systemic advocacy

Housing Justice

Grassroots power-building to fight displacement, secure stable housing, and advance renter protections.

Who Should Apply

- Organizations mobilizing community members to fight displacement and challenge exploitative landlord practices
- Groups advancing renter protections, affordable housing policy, and homeownership opportunities
- Organizations led by and accountable to communities most impacted by housing instability and displacement
- Groups working with Black, immigrant, and marginalized populations historically harmed by discriminatory housing policies
- Initiatives combining grassroots power-building with policy and systems change strategies

What We Fund

- Community organizing and tenant organizing campaigns
- Policy advocacy for renter protections, affordable housing, and anti-displacement strategies
- Grassroots power-building with directly impacted communities
- Integrated support services combined with organizing and advocacy
- Leadership development for housing justice advocates from impacted communities

Workers' Rights

Building worker power through organizing, collective bargaining, and policy advocacy for economic justice.

Who Should Apply

- Organizations building worker power through grassroots organizing and collective action
- Groups focused on securing living wages, combating wage theft, and advancing workplace safety protections
- Organizations defending workers' rights to organize, unionize, and bargain collectively
- Groups working alongside low-wage workers, immigrant communities, and others historically excluded from labor protections
- Organizations integrating policy advocacy with direct worker organizing and leadership development

What We Fund

- Worker organizing campaigns and collective bargaining support with clearly outlined power and systems analysis for change
- Policy advocacy to secure living wages and combat wage theft
- Workplace safety organizing and campaigns
- Leadership development for workers from impacted communities that is part of a larger strategy
- Advocacy defending rights to organize and bargain collectively

Key Notes: Organizations may apply to only one fund/funding stream per 12-month period. | Oakland open call for Letters of Introduction begins May 1, 2026 with future dates announced on our website. Chicago applicants are by invitation only. Each organization may submit only one LOI or application per twelve-month period. | First time grantee partners are usually for one year with multi-year funding considered for organizations with a longer history with the Foundation.
